Market Analysis

The global womens health market was estimated at $33.0 billion in 2015, $30.88 billion in 2016, USD 108.0 billion in 2017, USD 39.3 billion in 2018. The womens health market shares postmenopausal osteoporosis, hormonal fertility, endometriosis, birth control, menopause and polycystic ovarian syndrome (PCOS). In 2018, the postmenopausal osteoporosis accounted for the largest portion of the market because of a growing population of elderly women over 40 and the introduction of various drugs to treat menopausal osteoporosis.

Hormone fertility segment predicted strong growth after birth control because of high fertility-related disorders in developed countries. Furthermore, the availability of several hormonal imbalance drugs and market players investment in the segment may improve segment penetration in the coming years. Hormonal imbalances such as thyroid imbalance, prolactin, and estrogen increase in women because life pressure drives market growth.

The size of the global womens market is expected to reach $42.12 billion by 2023 and will increase $ 54.6 billion by 2026, according to a new report by Grand View Research, Inc., which expands at a 4.2% CAGR price during the forecast period.
